Guide to FOREIGN INFORMATION SOURCES

INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this pamphlet is to suggest various ways in which information about other countries may be obtained. Frequently not all the necessary information can be obtained from one source alone but it will be necessary to consult a number of reference works, contact several organizations, and follow a number of leads until the desired data are assembled and the comprehensive development of a subject may be achieved.

This booklet tries to help in several ways: it gives common sources of information in the section entitled SPECIFIC COUNTRY REFERENCES in which each of the countries with embassies or legations in Washington, D. C., is shown alphabetically. Here one may find the address of such embassy or legation, or such other foreign government offices maintained in the United States as a travel agency or a trade bureau, and the addresses of private, nonprofit business organizations which endeavor to promote international trade, travel, and commercial relations between the United States and the respective country.

In addition, many countries have consulates in the principal cities of the United States. These consular offices may be located by consulting the telephone directory. Consulates generally handle commercial interests of the country they represent, such as travel visas, consular invoices and other export shipping documents.

Many local chambers of commerce in the United States maintain world trade departments or services, and most have trade guidebooks and directories for reference purposes.

The United States Department of Commerce issues studies on economic conditions, living costs, trade and other aspects of foreign countries. These publications may be consulted or obtained at Department of Commerce Field Offices located in various cities throughout the United States (see page 41), or may be ordered from the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C. 20230.

The United States Department of State also issues reports on various countries and areas. Strategically located groups or libraries serve as distribution centers of Department of State publications. Their addresses are shown on page 44. Publications can also be procured from the Department of State, Washington, D. C. 20520.

Catalogues and price lists of U.S. Government publications may be consulted in most public libraries and in Department of Commerce Field Offices.

The Organization of American States (formerly the Pan American Union) issues material on each of the Latin American countries covering many subjects—travel, trade, customs, history, hemispheric relations, etc. A list of these publications may be had by writing to the Organization of American States, 17th and Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D. C.

Numerous United Nations publications relate to specific countries. A list may be obtained from the Sales Office, United Nations, New York, New York.

Your public library has a wealth of information on other countries. Basic references such as atlases and standard encyclopedias often will prove adequate. The Readers Guide to Periodical Literature covers current magazine articles. Ayers Directory of Newspapers and Periodicals includes those in special fields such as foreign language publications available in the United States. The Cumulative Book Index lists current books by subjects.

A partial list of organizations devoted to furthering good relations between the United States and other countries or areas is shown in a separate section of this pamphlet.

The last section shows selected bibliographical references which may point the way to other useful sources of information.
